Weinhard's Lager Beer.Joe Mitchell Chapple

An appreciation of a really great editor, by an editor, not so great

A few weeks ago, while seated before my desk and wrestling with the weighty problem of exploiting a great, and unique exposition, a portly, figure wafted through the tobacco smoke, that freighted the stuffy atmosphere of my sanctum. The figure was modestly garbed in a neat suit of blue serge.

"I'm Joe Chapple," it vouchsafed. "The hell," I thought, and then, with an almost imperceptible tone of refinement, "why how do you do?" Carefully buttoning my coat, brushing my palm across my locks, to see that they were immaculate; and falling into an air of indifference, I proceeded to survey Joe Mitchell Chapple. He was a man whose cognomen had rung in my ears for a decade. Who, on this great, broad earth has not heard of Joe Mitchell and his National magazine which he is continually lugging about the country? Who has not seen the ingenious artifices of this successful editor, those "ads" that read something like this: "Joe Chapple will bring the National to St. Louis," or "Meet Joe Chapple and his magazine on the Trail!" I do not believe a man, woman or child has not, at one time during his life, heard of the National's editor.

His name has become a household word, his magazine is one of the most popular of monthly periodicals, and this, as a result of his very efficient advertising. His appreciation of modesty differs, slightly, from that of the average person. Modesty is not sincere, he feels, so why bother with it. He realizes, that to succeed, he must "toot his own horn," for no one else will. No sensible person can take exception to this very logical reasoning, primarily, because it demands respect and secondarily, because the success of Joe Mitchell Chapple is a silent, but convincing, argument as to the solidity of his contention. Coupled with this delightfully original appreciation of modesty, is Chapple's personality. He is free from vanity, although, in him of all persons, it would be pardonable. He, apparently, forgets, that, in a short few years he has risen from among the masses, and from poverty to a place of prominence in the field of literature and to affluence. He numbers among his acquaintances presidents, kings, counts, barons, earls, senators and congressmen, but to these he gives no heartier greeting than to the man who labors in the street.

And while his success is largely due to his modesty (?), and to his personality, it is also due to a determination to accomplish all he undertakes and to the sympathy and help of a loving wife, a delightful woman, whom I had the pleasure of meeting. For a score years, these two have been married, but they remain "lovers." During the early part of his career, when Chapple suffered the trials, the tribulations and the vicissitudes of this merciless world, his wife was his constant companion, his only comfort, and at times when she grew depressed over the miscarriage of some plan, he, in turn, offered a loving word of encouragement. To day, they plan as of yore and no more concern in the successes or failures of the National is manifested by Chapple, than by his wife. But I am wandering.

Assuming that Chapple wished to see the exposition I suggested a tour of the grounds. Arm in arm, we meandered along the driveways and paths, so numerous about the Portland Centennial site, stopping here and there for a moment, to examine an attractive blossom or to drink in the inspiring grandeur of the scenic panorama rising from the horizon, only to wander on, where we knew not. The insistent call of hunger led us to a unique hostelry where, between goodly bites of indigestible goulash, we discussed various topics. The conversation was disconnected and from out the chaos rose Chapple's rigid adherence to his business. Whether he talked of the Russo-Japan strife, the possible outcome of the Franco-German controversy, affairs at the Nation's capital, or Bryan's chances of becoming president, his utterances were merged with thought of the National.

From descriptions of Roosevelt, I have thought he was the most strenuous of men, but I fear he must doff his hat to Chapple. We left the quaint inn and sought the government buildings on the peninsula. These are monstrous, their exhibits many, thorough and intricate. They require a week or a month in which to see them. With Chapple, thirty minutes were necessary. From department to department, from case to case he wandered, pausing only to examine more closely, some display of unusual interest or to ask a question of an attendant. Fatigue was stranger to him. On, and on, he walked and I followed like a sagacious canine. I must admit, however, that I was really interested and wished, if possible, to emulate some of his very good examples. Leaving the buildings, from Chapple emanated a sigh. He smiled and said:

"I would not have misad that for a trip across the continent. You know, it is in such breathing spells, as this, that you absorb real knowledge. These buildings contain an exposition. You may not perceive their virtues now, but later they will come to you and you will profit by them." Then he lapsed into a facetious mood and disclosed a trait, an accomplishment that I did not know he possessed.

"I say, ol' tosser, 'ave you one yer' pills?" he queried displaying surprising talent as a Cockney impersonator. How good it sounded, mimicry, street parlance, and coming from lips supposed to utter no words, but those of dignity.

"Now, look 'ere," he continued, "ose that begger? See 'im. I mean the blighter there with the goime pin, yer bloomin' ass." For a full half hour in fact, until we reached the Forestry building, he entertained me in this manner, and then, he once more assumed the dignity becoming his position.

"Longfellow's 'Temple of the Woods' realized," he whispered, feelingly, as we entered the structure's interior, the massive tree-columns, the crudeness of construction and the primeval atmosphere of the place filling us with awe. His versatility could not have been more fittingly demonstrated. Talk about extremes, from a Piccadilly music hall stunt to real and heartfelt sentiment. We devoted a half hour to the building and then returned to my sanctum. Fifteen minutes later he left to catch the afternoon train to Seattle. In a few days he will be in Boston where he will resume his duties. I may never see him again—the reader may never see him at all—hence this effort.

THE POPULAR TOULOUSE.

Variety of Geese That Have Many Commendable Qualities.

By far the most popular of the varieties of geese is the Toulouse. It has been longer known than some other useful kinds, like the African, and is a very rapid grower and reaches a large size, says American Cultivator.

The standard weights are twenty pounds for full grown ganders and eighteen pounds for females, but even this weight is often exceeded. The color is gray—in some strains a light gray, others darker—the underparts and snout whites, bill and legs reddish orange.

As layers the Toulouse rank medium, being rather less prolific than the African.

rican, but more so than the Emden. The season's output is from twenty to forty eggs per bird, geese two or three years old laying more than very young geese.

Their disposition is quiet, and they are less troublesome to care for than some other breeds and will get along very well in a field without much water. Breeders usually keep the geese laying as long as possible, hatching most of the eggs with hens.

The eggs hatch in thirty days, and a goose of average size will cover about fifteen. For the first few days they are liable to be chilled, but after the first week they are more hardy and require little care.

The usual plan is to confine them in small pens or yards which can be moved to fresh grass every day, because they require considerable pasture. Besides the grass or clover, they are fed on a mixture of Indian meal and shorts mixed with water, but squeezed almost entirely dry before feeding. When three or four weeks old they should be given wide range, but within an enclosure. When fattening, they are confined and fed a mixture of ground grains with beef scraps, gradually increasing the proportion of cornmeal and beef scraps until the food is about 10 per cent beef scraps and 90 per cent meal. Toulouse geese reach a weight of ten pounds at ten weeks of age and as a rule are sold more profitably at that weight as green geese.

Egg Eating Hens.

Answering an inquiry for the best method of "making nests for egg eating hens that are too valuable to have their necks wrung," Homer W. Jackson says in National Stockman:

All such nest plans are open to the general objection that the hens very often refuse to lay in them, and it is better to cure the habit directly, which can be done without any change in your present nests except to darken them, if this has not already been done. Then blow an egg and fill the shell with a paste made with two parts flour or meal and one part cayenne pepper and put it in the nest. When it is gone put in another and collect the fresh eggs as soon as they are laid. Usually two or three doctored eggs will effect a permanent cure. Give the hens something to do and supply plenty of oyster shell, so that they will not be tempted by broken or thin shelled eggs.

No Secret About It.

It is no secret that for cuts, burns, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklin's Arnica Salve. "It did not take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory, of Hope, Texas. 25 cents at Charles Rogers' drug store.

WOMAN'S SYMPATHY.

Is Proverbial—Astoria Women No Exception.

How much we owe to the sympathetic side of womankind. When others suffer, they cheerfully lend a helping hand. They tell you the means which brought relief to them that you may profit by their experience. Read the testimony given here by an Astoria woman:

Mrs. Close, wife of John Close, night engineer at Lindenberg's cold storage house, foot of Eighth street, residing at 230 Commercial street, says: "About a year ago we moved here from Portland and as I had a great deal to do, I overdid myself, and the result was I brought on kidney trouble. My back began to ache and as time rolled on it kept getting worse instead of better. It finally grew so bad that I could scarcely stoop or straighten after stooping. When I did any work requiring bending I could hardly get up, and I had headaches, dizzy spells, and at times everything before me looked blurred. I was just about to start to the store for a plaster to put on my back when I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and as they were so highly recommended for kidney trouble made up my mind to try them and procured a box at Charles Rogers' drug store on Commercial street. They went right to the root of the disease and helped me from the start and before I had finished the box I was cured. Everything is changed with me now and I have no symptoms of kidney trouble whatever."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Many people who are neglecting symptoms of kidney trouble, hoping "it will wear away," are drifting towards Bright's Disease, which is kidney trouble in one of its worst forms.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

stops irregularities, strengthens the urinary organs and builds up the worn-out tissues of the kidneys so they will perform their functions properly. Healthy kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood as it passes through them. Diseased kidneys do not, and the poisonous waste matter is carried by the circulation to every part of the body, causing dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, sluggish liver, irregular heart action, etc.

If you have any signs of Kidney or Bladder trouble commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once, as it will cure a slight disorder in a few days and prevent a fatal malady. It is pleasant to take and benefits the whole system.

How to Find Out.

You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased, and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE should be taken at once.

G. B. Burdette Testifies After Four Years.

G. B. Burdette of Garfield Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick-dust sediment and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of these symptoms during the four years that have elapsed, and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."
